What's your opinion? Web poll results

This week's poll at The Press Online asked, "Should Crittenden County Board of Education adopt a policy to raise the compulsory school attendance age to 18 effective in the 2015-16 school year?" Two-thirds of those responding believe students should be required to stay in school until they turn 18.

Districts lured to up dropout age

Last week, Kentucky education commissioner Terry Holliday said he's using money already in the department's budget to give a $10,000 grant to the first 57 school districts that raise their dropout age. Law-makers this year passed a bill that allows local districts to make their own decisions on raising the age, with a provision that once 55 percent of districts have done so, the change will be made statewide within four years.

The law becomes effective June 25, so the reward will go to the first 57 districts who raise the dropout age after that date. Crittenden County Board of Education is not expected to address any policy change on the dropout age until after that time.

Public meetings

- Marion Tourism Commission will meet at 6 p.m. today (Thursday) at the Marion Welcome Center.

Short-lived escape adds years to inmate's sentence

6 others appear in Crittenden Circuit Court

STAFF REPORT

The inmate who walked away from a work detail at Crittenden County Detention Center this winter will be serving an few extra years in prison for his half-day of freedom. He and five other individuals pleaded guilty last Thursday in Crittenden Circuit Court to various felony and misdemeanor charges. Of those who pleaded guilty last week, three waived further court proceedings and were formally sentenced by Circuit Judge René Williams. The others will be formally sentenced next month.

Jason S. Arkenberg, 38, of Louisville, was sentenced to a cumulative three years for escaping from a work detail at the county lockup on Feb. 10. Arkenberg was charged with second-degree escape, a Class D felony; two counts of third-degree burglary, Class D felonies; theft, a Class A misdemeanor; and third-degree criminal mischief, a Class B misdemeanor. Jail officials said Arkenberg was taking out the trash as part of a trusty work project when he left on foot. Arkenberg hid out for several hours that Sunday, taking refuge in two Marion buildings before turning himself in after being cornered by police at the former Turner and Conyer sawmill off U.S. 60 West. Arkenberg's new sentence will run consecutive to his current jail time. He has been moved to another jail in Kentucky. Arkenberg received a one-year sentence for escape, one year on each burglary charge, 12 months for misdemeanor theft and 90 days for misdemeanor criminal mischief. The misdemeanors will run concurrently with the felony charges, which are to run consecutive. He was also ordered to pay restitution of more than $100 for damage done at the Kentucky Transportation Cabinet's county garage on Old Salem Road and the privately-owned sawmill. In other cases heard by Judge Williams last week: ■ James A. Baker, 44, of Marion, pleaded guilty to three counts of felony burglary and a misdemeanor for breaking into Marion Church of God, a home and another building between Jan. 15 and March 6. He was sentenced to five years on a first-degree burglary charge, one year each for two second-degree burglaries and 90 days on the misdemeanor. The sentences are to be served concurrently for a total of five years in prison. ■ Rose M. Ennis, 50, of Marion, pleaded guilty to cultivating marijuana plants, possession of marijuana, second-degree trafficking of a controlled substance (hydrocodone), possession of drug paraphernalia and first-

Old World culture offers new vantage for students

By KIM VINCE
CCHS HISTORY TEACHER

There's nothing like a midday gelato in the middle of a city piazza covered in cobblestone and surrounded by historic architecture. Well, maybe there is...having gelato in the company of friends day after day. Thirteen Crittenden County High School students, some of their parents and a few teachers recently traveled to Italy to explore its rich culture, history, architecture and, of course, food—like Italian-style ice cream on a cobble public square.

On what began as a very rainy Easter Sunday in Venice, some amazing experiences shined on the group making their way through streets filled with native Italians and tourists. More than 80 percent of Italians identify themselves as Catholics, leading to quite a frenzy on Pope Francis' first Easter. But as the clouds broke, the Italian way of life became more clear. Students were able to ride a gondola down the Grand Canal and under the Rialto, witness the shaping of a handmade horse at a glass blowing factory and purchase traditional carnival masks seen throughout Venice. And, of course, we had gelato. The contrast of Renaissance Florence with its new commercial tourism provided great food for thought. Outside the Duomo, Florence's famous red dome icon, students found art vendors, street performers and other novelties such as plastic "splat-pigs" for sale. Michelangelo's 500-year-old David has also been brought into the 21st century with fiber optic sensors placed on his right leg to measure the cracking pattern in the statue and to, hopefully, prevent any major damage. The gelato followed suit by mixing traditional flavors such as chocolate and strawberry with modern options of licorice and cantaloupe. The Tuscany landscape overwhelmed us as we drove to Assisi and onto Rome. Herds of sheep, grapevines and olive trees scattered the countryside. A village built out of a hillside approached on the left and Tommaso, our guide, pointed out the fortress, basilica and other structures of the town. The small town atmosphere proved a welcome break from the hustle and bustle of the city. The students amazed me as they hiked up the hill to absorb in the breathtaking view and by the respect they showed in the Basilica of St. Francis of Assisi as a friar led them through the masterpiece of medieval architecture. Lunch was topped off with another round of gelato, but this time with stracciatella, a chocolate chip flavor. We took in the sites of the Sistine Chapel, St. Peter's Basilica and the Coliseum during daylight, and their majesty overwhelmed us. Yet the atmosphere at night enchanted the group. We tossed our coins in the Trevi Fountain, climbed the 135 stairs at the Spanish steps and, of course, had another serving of gelato. Concluding our trip at one of the most well-known

Quilt shows herald 2013 Backroads celebration

STAFF REPORT

While tens of thousands of people from around the world flock to western Kentucky for AQS Quilt Week in Paducah, local quilt shows will help mark the annual Backroads Festival in Crittenden County held in conjunction with the 28th American Quilter's Society event. The Woman's Club of Marion and Crittenden County Extension Homemakers Association will host separate quilt shows next week in celebration of the uniquely American art form of batting, basting and appliqués. Quilt Week runs April 24-27, but busloads of overflow visitors to Paducah will make their way through Crittenden County beginning as early as Monday, embarking on tours through the local Amish community. Downtown businesses will also flourish from the influx of sightseers, with restaurants directing hundreds of out-of-town dollars back into Marion's tourism efforts by means of the city's restaurant and lodging tax. For quilting enthusiasts, the Woman's Club will host a quilt show April 26 at their home on Carlisle Street. The exhibit runs 10 a.m.–2 p.m. Individuals wishing to participate in the show may drop off a quilt from 9 a.m. until the time of the event on show day. The show is open to the public, who will select the Best of Show winner. The Woman's Club will also have a bake sale during the event. On the following day, April 27, the Backroads Quilt Show will be held inside city hall in the council chambers. Quilts may

Spring cleaning rules apply; county offers free dumping

STAFF REPORT

Under the warmth of the April sun, residents of Crittenden County are emerging from a winter's hibernation to the annual rite of the season—spring cleaning. With the ritual, though, comes rules, and the Kentucky Division for Air Quality is reminding people who are starting their spring cleanup projects that there are restrictions to disposing of the junk removed from the rafters, garage and basement. One of those rules applies to outdoor burning, a popular means in rural areas across the Commonwealth to erase the clutter. Division Director John Lyons says burning trash is illegal in Kentucky, though many residents don't realize that. And fines for illegal burning can go as high as $25,000 per day per violation. But this week, there is a free alternative to disposing of your trash in an illegal manner. Crittenden County Convenience Center will be open 8 a.m.–4 p.m. Friday and Saturday of this week only to assist with spring cleaning, accepting home debris at no charge. All large items, including tires and appliances, will be taken at the center on U.S. 60 East, just outside of Marion. There will remain a charge, however, for disposal of household garbage. This is an annual program offered by Crittenden Fiscal Court. If you can't make it to the convenience center this weekend, remember that Kentucky law prohibits the burning of many of the same materials accepted at the facility at no cost this Friday and Saturday. Those items include plastic, tires, cans, coated wire, carpeting and food. It's also illegal to burn trailers, buildings and construction and dem-

Free debris disposal

Just in time for spring cleaning, Crittenden County will offer free dumping this Friday and Saturday at its convenience center off U.S. 60 East. The annual program will see the disposal center open 8 a.m.–4 p.m. both days. All large items, including tires and appliances, will be accepted, but disposing of household garbage requires a fee.

olition debris such as shingles, drywall and insulation.

Some open burning in Kentucky is permitted. For instance, campfires, fires for cooking and fires to dispose of tree limbs are allowed in Crittenden County as well as many other counties across the Commonwealth. Burning within 150 feet of woodland or brushland, though, will remain illegal during daylight hours between 6 a.m. and 6 p.m. until May 1, when Kentucky's spring fire hazard season ends. Firefighters across the state have been battling field and forest fires in the last few weeks as warmer temperatures have drawn people outdoors. Just last week, Crittenden County firefighters battled several such blazes. For more information on outdoor burning laws, visit air.ky.gov or call (888) BURN-LAW. For further information on the county's free dumping this weekend at the convenience center, call Crittenden County Judge-Executive's office at 965-5251.

Lawmakers earn ‘A’ for 2013 session work

Crittenden County has been fortunate for many years to have truly representative government in Frankfort. Both Senate and House members who in recent memory have carried the water for residents of Crittenden County—as well as the remaining population of their respective districts—have done a fine job of reflecting the largely conservative nature of their constituents—Democrat and Republican—through their work at the Capitol.

The current legislative contingency is no different. During the most recent session of the General Assembly, both Rep. Lynn Bechler, a Marion Republican, and Sen. Dorsey Ridley, a Democrat from Henderson, put loyalty to the people of their district above all else, transcending allegiance to their party. Their legislative actions on issues like abortion, spending, gun rights, immigration, child safety, religious freedom and the rights of individuals largely reflect the views of their electors.

Both men have proven receptive to input from home and have made themselves accessible to constituents, taking time to hear the smallest concerns to opinions on the most contentious issues. And in a day when some lawmakers find just showing up at the Capitol a chore, Bechler and Ridley had perfect attendance during the recent 30-day session.

If we were to grade their overall performance, we find no reason to score either man at anything less than an A. No one can please all of the people all of the time, but their work in Frankfort has effectively echoed the convictions prevalent among those back home in western Kentucky.

As one of our own, Rep. Bechler—the first lawmaker to represent Crittenden County in its entirety in 99 years—was not afraid to rock the boat in his first stint in the statehouse. He was willing on more than one occasion to stand in overwhelming minority, even on his own, as a dissenting voice for both fiscal and social conservative beliefs.

My nephew, Sam Higgs, is a pitcher on Henderson County's high school baseball team. Last year, he and his fellow Colonels traveled to Marion to take on Crittenden County. Sam's mother (my sister Sherry), his aunt (sister Kay) and his grandmother (my mom) made the trip here as well.

They had never been to Marion-Crittenden County Park, which is, among other things, home field for the Rockets baseball team. It was one of those typical late afternoons in spring where all of Marion seemed to be at the park. The parking lot was jam-packed; every ball field had a game in progress; skateboarders were flying across the ramps of the skate park; even the volleyball area was covered up with folks.

My relatives were much impressed. At some point, Mom made the comment, "I can't believe you all have such a nice park in a town this size!" Several people in the Henderson contingent echoed her sentiment.

Momentarily filled with pride, I didn't point out to our visitors the dozen or two light poles that desperately needed replacing or the heavily-vandalized restrooms and picnic pavilions. Nor did I mention the busted up paving at the basketball court or the numerous storm drain facilities that needed repair. No, I kept quiet about these items and just enjoyed the moment.

senses to bring their writing to life as well as metaphors and similes. I want to have you write from the heart.

"Becoming better writers is our goal, whether writing for personal family legacies or stories for publication."

Defew has been published more than two dozen times, including entries in the "Chicken Soup for the Soul" series. While she might be the most polished author of the set, her enthusiasm for writing has become contagious.

"One is excited about her children's book, soon to be published," Defew said of the group's successes, "another about her memoirs."

Though writing is the common bond that brings Silver Linings together, the meetings are about much more than writing.

"Close friendships are being formed as we share our hearts and lives," Defew said. "We always leave with a sense of confidence and hope that we are on our way to better things."

Unfortunately, it is a fact that as impressive as the park is, the facility has some very serious—and costly—problems facing it. We must fix these problems, and we must fix them soon. A recent article in this newspaper described the situation facing the park board and local government, but it didn't tell the whole story:

■ There are more than $1 million in improvements at the park, from lighting to fencing to dugouts to bleachers to skate ramps. When these items need repair or replacing, we're usually talking about a lot of money. It took more than $30,000—half of which, thankfully, came from a state grant—just to resurface and stripe the high school's oval track this winter.

■ Inadequate lighting prompted the Kentucky High School Athletic Association to take away Crittenden County's hosting of last year's regional baseball tournament, an event that would have brought hundreds of people to Marion and pumped thousands of dollars into the local economy. As The Crittenden Press article indicated, it would cost in the neighborhood of $250,000 to even make a dent in replacing substandard lighting.

■ Security cameras are sorely needed at the park. Criminal activity in the form of vandalism and theft has cost the community several thousand dollars over the past few years. We simply do not have enough police officers to maintain all-night patrol vigils for this or any other single location in the city.

■ City and county governments have made major drainage improvements at the park in recent years, but several more are still needed. One of these threatens to close off the lower parking lot to traffic if not corrected soon. While local government equipment operators and laborers can usually perform these improvements, they are extremely time consuming and, of course, rock and other materials used in the process aren't cheap.

Marion-Crittenden County Park Board, a group of volunteers appointed by the mayor and judge-executive, does an outstanding job of keeping the park going. The board's budget is very limited, however, and contains little extra money for making repairs and improvements. In response to this situation, the city's tourist commission recently pledged to further assist the park board with paying some of its bills, and the county's fiscal court has made application through the federal Land and Water Conservation Fund to finance the aforementioned lighting upgrades. Additionally, the park board has developed a comprehensive list of potential projects/improvements to help guide intermediate and long-range funding decisions by the local governments.

Until cameras or other security measures are in place, the general public can help by reporting vandalism and any other suspicious activity to Marion Police Department. Don't assume someone else will call it in to us; the sooner we know about an illegal activity taking place, the better our chance of cracking down on it.

The park is one of our most important community assets. We must meet the challenge of preserving and improving it. I want my mom and other visitors to Crittenden County to keep the impression, "I can't believe you all have such a nice park in a town this size."

(Mark Bryant has served as Marion's city administrator since October 2006. He is a 20-year-plus veteran of local government, with about 10 years as a city or county manager. Writers' workshop offers encouragement, guidance

By DARYL K. TABOR

PRESS EDITOR

Henry David Thoreau had Walden Pond. Ernest Hemingway had Key West. For Linda Defew, it's a rustic cabin overlooking a small lake on the rural Livingston County property she shares with her husband, Eddie.

Defew, an accomplished author and occasional columnist for The Crittenden Press, is not stingy with her inspiration. In fact, she eagerly shares with a small group of budding writers her insight and skills honed over her years as a creative writer.

Welcome to the Silver Lining Writers' Group. Membership in the club is not exclusive. All that is needed is a sharp pencil and an urge to spill forth your thoughts, experiences and emotions onto paper. Of course, modern tools of the trade available to writers today—keyboards and monitors—are also welcome.

"The group is growing every time we meet," Defew said. "We had 10 at our April 6 meeting and had so much to talk about, we ran over by an hour."

Such informality is part of the charm of the novice workshops held every other month or so, depending on participants' schedules.

"You have to have fun to write," said Defew, who started the group about three years ago as a means to foster the local writing scene and encourage aspiring authors who may simply be waiting for a spark to be generated in the company of like-minded artists.

Though casual and relaxed, meetings of the Silver Lining Writers' Group are not without a measure of formality. Each meeting, writers are met with worksheets and exercises designed to spark the imagination.

"Writing prompts such as, 'I remember' and 'I wish' bring out the writer in all of us," Defew said, providing an example of the "curriculum" practiced at meetings. "Members are urged to use their five

All sinkholes not created equal

STAFF REPORT

No two sinkholes are created equal. In fact, in Crittenden County, they can range in size from a couple of feet across to encompassing an area larger than the footprint of Cowboys Stadium in Dallas. And they can form as a open pit or merely a depression in the landscape.

Chances are, most residents don't think much about sinkholes, at least not until they make the news like the one in February that swallowed and killed a Florida man as he lay sleeping in his bed or one that temporarily closed and threatened to undermine Ky. 902 near Fredonia just last month.

But sinkholes are not just someone else's problem. The Kentucky Geologic Survey (KGS) has documented 802 of them in Crittenden County, with untold numbers left unreported. The vast majority of recorded sinkholes in the county lie clustered west and south of Marion.

Local farmers or any property owner with several acres of land may find them a nuisance, pock-marking their land. Still others might suddenly find them threatening to undermine structures at their residence.

"The term sinkhole is a colloquial catch-all term for any depression in the ground," said James C. Currans, a geologist with KGS in Lexington.

Dolines are a common form of sinkhole found in Crittenden County, Currans explained. They appear as depressions in karst landscape, formed from the dissolution of soluble rocks like limestone, which is a prevalent geologic feature in places like western Kentucky and Florida, forming caves, springs and underground streams.

The largest recorded doline in Crittenden County covers 94 acres just off Ky. 723 near the Livingston County border. In fact, there are nearly 300 such sinkholes in the county that are more than an acre in area.

Cover-collapse sinkholes, meantime, are the open pits that can devour land and structures, explains Currans. They form when a conduit carrying water creates a small underground chamber and eventually undermines the surface cover, carrying away soil and leaving an open chamber. Though these can grow large enough to swallow structures and create very real hazards, most are no more than a couple of yards across.

"In Kentucky, the average diameter of a cover-collapse sinkhole is about 7 feet," said Currans.

These sinkholes can be reported to KGS online at <http://kgs.uky.edu/kgswweb/kgswweb/sinkhole.asp> or by calling Currans at (859) 323-0526. Once recorded, sinkholes can be investigated and assessed. Currans said KGS is interested in cover-collapse sinkholes with a diameter as small as 1 foot just as much as larger ones.

SBDM seeks two parent-members

Crittenden County High School PTO is taking parent nominations for the SBDM council through today (Thursday). All parents of 2013-14 high school students are eligible to serve on the council and to vote in next week's election.

Nominations must be submitted to the CCHS office.

The PTO will hold an election for two parent-representatives for the SBDM 7 a.m.–3 p.m. next Thursday in the school office and at next Thursday's PTO meeting at 5:30 p.m.

Holland Medical to move across town

Before summer ends, Elizabeth Floyd hopes to be on the move. The office manager for Holland Medical Services in Marion said the business has outgrown its current location on Sturgis Road and will be moving across town in a few months to a new building.

The move will give the supplier of home medical equipment and services three times more floor space. The new store going up next to the Kenegy office on South Main Street has a 3,000-square-foot floor plan. The current office offers around 1,000 square feet.

"We are really excited," Floyd said.

The larger office is being built by Tommy Wright of Marion, who has agreed to construct the building to the specifications of Florida-based Rotech Healthcare Inc., the parent company of Holland Medical. A lease has already been signed, Floyd added.

No opening date is set, but Floyd expects to be moving in three to four months.

Coal production lowest since 1960s

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

A new state report says coal production in Kentucky has reached its lowest level since 1965 and mining employment fell by 4,000 jobs in eastern Kentucky last year. But western Kentucky mining has fared better.

Coal-producing counties in eastern Kentucky have suffered in recent years from increased enforcement of federal mining laws, competition from natural gas and the mining out of easier-to-reach, underground coal seams. The Courier-Journal reports employment at eastern Kentucky mines fell nearly 30 percent from December 2011 to December 2012. The drop was from 13,608 jobs to 9,450.

Production in the region fell to 49.4 million tons, the lowest level since 1965. The report came from the state's Department for Energy Development and Independence. In western Kentucky, production was up last year by 2.5 percent, to 42 million tons.

Fence now protects 'Victory Gardens'

A group of 17 area churches determined to keep needy residents of the county stocked with fresh produce this summer have had to divert hundreds of dollars to protect their investment. Robbie Kirk, a member of Life in Christ Church and one of the organizers of the "Victory Gardens" seeded on city-owned acreage adjacent to Shopko, said a fence erected along the edge of the property leased for planting was needed to keep vehicles from destroying the property and eventual crops.

The $1,100 barrier was put up this month along Old Morganfield Road after vehicles were discovered to have rutted much of the acreage intended for crops and destroyed portions of a gravel path installed last year to be used during planting and harvesting.

The fencing, however, was not intended to eliminate access to a popular fishing pond just off the road. Though the barrier prohibits entry to the area by vehicles, a 4-foot opening in the fencing was installed to allow for foot traffic. The fence line is set back far enough from the road to allow for parking.

City officials say they are OK with the fence and retain keys to the gates that allow access by vehicle.

Americans freed from tax obligation

Today (Thursday) is Tax Freedom Day for the average American, but Kentucky taxpayers are almost two weeks ahead of the curve.

Tax Freedom Day is the date when the average taxpayer has earned enough money to pay all federal, state and local taxes owed to the government. This year, tax freedom comes 107 days into the calendar, five days later than last year, according to the Tax Foundation, a non-partisan Washington think tank.

In Kentucky however, the average taxpayer was liberated on April 6, ranking the Commonwealth 10th earliest in the nation.

In 2013, the average American will hand over 29.4 percent of their income to various levels of government.

But things could be worse. Thirteen years ago, when Americans paid a full third of their income in taxes, Tax Freedom Day didn't arrive until May 1. A century earlier, in 1900, reports the Tax Foundation, taxes took away only 5.9 percent of personal income. Tax Freedom Day that year came Jan. 22.

City of Marion certified drug-free employer, saves on premiums

STAFF REPORT

The City of Marion has adopted a zero-tolerance policy toward substance abuse, enabling the municipal employer to become a certified drug-free workplace. Certification through the Kentucky League of Cities Insurance Services Program will not only make for a safer workplace for city employees, it also saves the taxpayers money.

Already, the city has received a $600 refund on its workers' compensation policy, according to City Administrator Mark Bryant.

In 2007, the General Assembly enacted the Kentucky Drug Free Workplace Program in response to rampant drug use and abuse throughout the Commonwealth. According to the U.S. Department of Health and Mental Services Substance Abuse and Mental Health Services Administration, more than 70 percent of drug abusers are employed.

The legislation was designed to encourage Kentucky employers to implement a program to identify drug and alcohol use in the workplace, educate workers on the dangers of substance abuse and assist in treatment if drug use is detected.

"We really feel like this is in the best interest of the community and for (city government) that we are a certified drug-free workplace," Bryant said. "It cuts down on the possibility of accidents and high workers' comp claims. Plus, this gives us a break on workers' comp insurance."

Including city firefighters, about 50 employees will be subject to random drug-testing throughout the year. Bryant said three employees will be randomly chosen twice a year to submit to an 11-panel drug screen.

It's a one strike and you're out deal, Bryant added.

The certification as a drug-free workplace will have to be reviewed and renewed annually. As long as certification remains current, the City of Marion will be eligible to receive at least a 5 percent discount on workers' compensation premiums.

Teen Leadership Conference held at Ed-Tech Center

STAFF REPORT

High school students had the opportunity to mentor eighth-graders at the first-ever Teen Leadership Conference held at the Ed-Tech Center last week. The event was sponsored by the Crittenden County Family Resource and Youth Service Center in conjunction with Crosswalk Learning Center.

Cheryl Burks, site coordinator at Crosswalk Learning Center, said Friday's conference provided a great opportunity to address the needs of the students as they prepare to make the important transition from middle to high school.

"It's a great way to bring in our high school students, who are student leaders, and set up a solid foundation for those students coming in to the high school next year," Burks said.

Members of the high school's Peer Mediation Team were on hand to lead eighth-graders through different sessions of the conference.

High school principal Rhonda Callaway was the conference's keynote speaker. She welcomed the middle schoolers, telling them how excited she was to have them entering high school in the coming school year.

Professional speakers, such as Chris Sparks of the Pennyroyal Center in Hopkinsville, spoke to students on the dangers of prescription drug abuse. Students also received information about building healthy relationships, stress management, suicide prevention and cyber bullying.

A forum on College and Career Readiness was designed to answer student questions about college and various professions. Members of the Peer Mediation Team also shared their plans for after high school graduation.

Statewide, schools are being recognized for such efforts to prepare their students for the next level.

Earlier this week, Gov. Steve Beshear and Kentucky Education Commissioner Terry Holliday teamed up with ACT Inc., in Frankfort to celebrate Kentucky's progress toward the goal of college- and career-readiness for all students and recognize those who embody or advance the state's commitment to preparing students for success.

"From preschool to career, getting students ready to take the next step is vital not only to their future but Kentucky's future," Gov. Beshear said in a news release Monday. "Our ability to create and maintain an energetic and highly trained workforce depends on that preparation. Education is the single-biggest factor in determining long-term success for our state—whether success is defined by the quality of life for our people, the stability of our economy, or the competitive strength of our business sector."

Monday's event was part of the ACT College and Career Readiness Campaign that celebrates achievement and creates awareness around the goal of college and career readiness for all.

Kentucky is one of seven states invited to participate in the national campaign's inaugural year.

Commissioner Holliday said the Kentucky Board of Education's "Unbridled Learning: College/Career-Readiness for All" initiative is the department's top priority.

"By gaining the knowledge and skills they will need in college, postsecondary training, military or the workplace, students can be confident they will be successful whatever path they choose," he said. "We appreciate the efforts of the governor, and our many other our partners in helping us make progress toward our goal."

In 2010, only 34 percent of students in Kentucky graduated from high school ready for college/career. By 2012, that number had risen to 47 percent, Holliday said.

Evening of the Arts to be held Tuesday

BY JASON TRAVIS

STAFF WRITER

Crittenden County High School will present an Evening of the Arts 7 - 9 p.m., Tuesday at Fohs Hall. The evening will present a collaboration of talent from students participating in band, chorus, speech, poetry and visual arts.

Steven Baker, the visual arts instructor at the high school, said in addition to performances by the chorus, concert and jazz bands, the after-school guitar club sponsored by Crosswalk Learning Center will also perform. The art club will also set up a gallery to display ceramics, paintings and drawings.

"They have been polishing up some of their earlier work trying to decide what they want to show," Baker said. "I'm trying to encourage everybody to put something in the show. Even if it's not something they did here in class. A lot of my students do a lot of work on their own."

Doors will open at 7 p.m. For the first half-hour, individuals are encouraged to tour the gallery and view the art displays. In addition to a coffee bar, appetizers will be served.

Afterwards, doors will open to the theater for the audience to view various student performances. Baker said the Evening of the Arts event is a great opportunity to showcase the effort each student is putting forth in their course work.

High school students aren't just being recognized locally. Baker said sophomore art student Erica Hardin was recently recognized by the website Artsonia.com as a nominee for Artist of the Week. At the beginning of the year, Baker sent permission slips to the parents of all his students encouraging them to publish images of their artwork online.

Artsonia.com is a free online art gallery that features different pieces of art each week.

Hardin's image of the sun and moon caught the attention of the selection committee.

"I told her you were picked out of all of these people in the country as the nominee. That's something to be proud of," Baker said. "They did send an award. She's pretty excited about it and I am too."

Income guidelines change for food program

STAFF REPORT

Since last week's publication, income guidelines for the federal Commodity Food Supplemental Program, have changed.

The food program, administered through the Pennyryle Allied Community Services (PACS) office on North Walker Street, offers qualifying seniors various distributions of food items. Seniors receive such items as two boxes of staple milk, two boxes of cereal, two bottles of juice and cans of vegetables and fruit. Items such as spaghetti, canned pork or beef, beef stew, macaroni, rice and peanut butter are alternated.

There remain several open slots in the program for Crittenden Countians, said Kathy Penn-Belt at the local PACS office.

The income guidelines have increased slightly from what was reported in last week's issue of The Crittenden Press, making more people eligible for the program. As an example of eligibility, Belt said a one-person household can now gross up to $1,245 monthly. A two-person household, such as a husband and wife, can gross up to $1,681 a month. A three-person household can gross up to $2,116 a month.

To determine eligibility, individuals must also bring photo identification, driver's license or a birth certificate. They must also bring their Social Security card. An awards letter for the year 2013 is also needed.

Participants must show up on distribution day to receive the food. If they cannot pick up the food personally, they may fill out an application in which they can have a designated representative pick up the goods for them.

Food is distributed from 1 to 2:30 p.m., the Friday following the second Wednesday of each month at the rescue squad building located beside the Crittenden County Detention Center on Carlisle Street in Marion. If that date falls on any holiday, distribution date will be changed. Seniors must be 60 years old and meet income qualifications. Belt said any kind of income must be counted from all household members. That includes Social Security, SSI, any type of pension and child support received for a grandchild that is living in the household.

Spring bringing alive another farm season

Nice to finally see the spring weather, with all the excitement of what this year's growing season will bring. As you drive down the road, it is very apparent it is that time of year. Lots of trucks, tractors and other various implements are busy going where they need to be.

I just want to say thank you to all of the hard-working farmers and ranchers we have here in Crittenden and Livingston counties, as well as everywhere in the United States. Without the hard work you do every day, there would be no breakfast, lunch or dinner. So, if you ate a meal today, please thank a farmer or rancher.

Last week we mentioned going to the two counties' conservation district dinners. I want to share with everyone the various individuals who received awards at these banquets.

In Crittenden County, the winners are:

- FFA soil judging: Jaden Willis and Jacob Greenwell.
- Conservation art and writing: Jenna Potter and Brenden Phillips.
- Poster contest winners:

Noah Highfil, Tessa Potter, Maegan Potter and Luke Highfil.

■ Friend of Wildlife Award: H.F. Simpson.

■ Master Conservationist: William Jay "Bill" Asbridge.

In Livingston County, the winners are:

■ Master Conservationist: Wes Kitchens Farms.

It is nice to see such interest in conservation and agriculture in our young children. And we want to thank our Friends of Wildlife and Master Conservationist winners for setting an outstanding example. Congratulations to everyone.

KFB's 'Farmer of the Year' application process open

NEWS RELEASE

The 2013 Kentucky Farm Bureau "Farmer of the Year" application process is now open, and the organization is seeking the Commonwealth's finest nominees for this prestigious award.

KFB initiated an annual "Farmer of the Year" awards program as a way to recognize its members for their commitment to excellence in agriculture, efficiency in farming practices, sound financial management and outstanding leadership in their county Farm Bureau and other civic organizations. Eligibility and guidelines are included with the application, and can be downloaded at kyfb.com/federation. All applications should be postmarked by July 1.

Entries will be narrowed down to the top three applicants over the summer, and finalists will be announced in mid-August. Judges will visit the three finalists in mid-September to conduct interviews and see their operations in action. The winner will be announced at the organization's 2013 state annual meeting in Louisville on Dec. 6.

KFB's "Farmer of the Year" will receive $1,000 from Kentucky Farm Bureau Federation and will be presented with a commemorative award during the organization's annual meeting in December. State finalists will receive $250 from Kentucky Farm Bureau Federation.

In addition to the statewide recognition and prizes, KFB's "Farmer of the Year" winner will represent Kentucky in the Swisher Sweets/Sunbelt Expo Southeastern Farmer of the Year contest, the South's most prestigious agricultural award, in Moultrie, Ga., Oct. 14-16, 2014.

The state winner will also receive $2,500 from Swisher International and a $500 gift certificate from Southern States Cooperative. Kentucky's winner will compete against nine other state winners for the chance to win a $15,000 award from Swisher International and several other sponsor-based prizes.

Rally assails plan to limit tailwater access

MURRAY LEDGER & TIMES

The protest against proposed boating barriers being placed at the tailwaters of 10 Cumberland River dams, including the one on Lake Barkley, received a powerful boost Saturday.

In what was deemed the Freedom to Fish Rally, Congressman Ed Whitfield and U.S. senators Mitch McConnell and Rand Paul from Kentucky, as well as Tennessee U.S. Sen. Lamar Alexander, all voiced opposition to the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers' idea at Barkley Dam. The event was named after a bill Whitfield is sponsoring in the U.S. House of Representatives that has come to be known as the Freedom to Fish Act and would prevent the Corps measure from happening. A similar measure has been sponsored in the upper chamber of the Capitol by all four Kentucky and Tennessee Senators.

"It's so frustrating," Whitfield said of the Corps' proposal that it says is in the name of safety for boaters. "They've had an operational management plan in place since 1996, and the whole reason they're doing this is because, all of a sudden, in 2012, they've decided they're not in compliance with their own regulations.

"That's the only reason given."

The loudest voices heard Saturday were those of Livingston County Judge-Executive Chris Lasher and Lyon County Judge-Executive Wade White, who both said communication with the Corps of Engineers' Nashville

District has been, at times, non-existent.

White displayed what he said were several pages of documents he had requested via the Freedom of Information Act that had information redacted in red blocks.

"They're barricading me from the information that I'm needing to see," said White, who first raised the issue last fall after learning of the Corps' plan and immediately thought of what it would do to the tourism industry that depends on fishing for much of its dollars annually.

Crittenden County Judge-Executive Perry Newcom, who was not at Saturday's rally, said barricades would negatively affect commercial fishermen from Crittenden County, and he has also issued his concerns with the Corps.

Rain, warmer temps allow state's farmers into cornfields

STAFF REPORT

Much needed rain and warmer weather last week in Kentucky has improved crop prospects, reports the University of Kentucky Agriculture Weather Center.

Temperatures averaged 61 degrees across the state, which was 6 degrees warmer than normal and the first week with above normal temperatures since mid-February. Rainfall amounts for the week were above normal with precipitation averaging 1.25 inches statewide, which is 0.23 inches above normal.

Corn seeding is now under way. However, as of Monday, only 7 percent of the corn had been seeded, well behind last year's 55 percent and the average of 18.

Meantime, winter wheat is 77 percent good or excellent. Hay was measured at 48 percent good or excellent. Another 37 percent was rated as fair.

Precipitation for 2013 measured at the UK weather station at Princeton was 16.12 inches as of Monday, 0.72 inches above normal.

God’s laws govern the people of his kingdom

Most of us know who the president of our nation is, but he knows few of us. Although we know him, and he knows of us, we still don't know each other intimately if we haven't had a heart-to-heart communication with each other.

We also know all national governments have their own set of laws and regulations applicable to the people. History tells us we have been released from the British crown for well more than 200 years now. But that in no way sets us free from having any law at all.

In like manner, many of us claim to know God and trust that He knows us. He also has his own set of laws to govern the people of His Kingdom. For our union with God to become a reality, we must pursue an obedient, faithful and loving relationship with Him.

Commentary by Felty Yoder

Jesus has set us free from the ministration of condemnation and death. And he brought the new covenant, whereby we can draw near to God, Hebrews 10 tells us. Matthew 5-7 teaches us a lot on what the Law of the Spirit of Life in Christ Jesus consists of.

Here, Jesus also admonishes his listeners to hear and do these sayings. In 1 John

2:4, we read, "He that saith, I know him, and keepeth not his commandments, is a liar, and the truth is not in him."

Now we want to look at another aspect of truth. Romans 4 and Galatians 3 prove that Abraham was justified by faith and not by works; before he was justified by works. That is always the truth in justification. One cannot be justified by works from a life under condemnation. Abraham was not, and neither can we be.

Upon true faith, which is conditioned by repentance, God justifies us before we have produced the works to prove it. Sinners cannot commend themselves to God by works. Some people are led to believe that man is justified by faith alone. The fact is, the Bible nowhere says that, but it does say the opposite. "Ye see then how that by works a man is justified, and not by faith only," reads James 2:24.

We are saved by grace through Jesus. It is the start and very important. It is the means, and not the end in itself. Everyone knows that if one continues to linger at the starting point, he is never going to go anywhere. "But seek ye first the Kingdom of God and his righteousness; and all these things shall be added onto you," reads Matthew 6:33. That includes personal salvation.

In other words, when we seek first the Kingdom of God and his righteousness, personal salvation will take care of itself. Our personal salvation is our hope for eternal life. And what is eternal life? "And this is eternal that they might know thee, the only true God, and Jesus Christ, whom thou has sent."

But what about the ones we read about in Matthew 7:21-23, who say, have we not done many wonderful works in your name. And the Lord answers, "I never knew you?" In other words, what do you call someone who is mothered by the church, but the father doesn't claim him as his child?

Grocery prices up in Kentucky

STAFF REPORT

The latest Marketbasket Survey, conducted by the Kentucky Farm Bureau Federation in March 2013, indicates that average retail food prices in supermarkets across the state increased slightly during the first quarter of the year. According to the survey, the total cost of 40 basic grocery items was $116.27. This total reflects an increase of $0.74, or 0.6 percent, from the same list of items reported in the previous quarter.

Kentucky's most recent retail food price results reflected small increases overall, yet fared slightly better than the American Farm Bureau Federation's national Marketbasket Survey, which monitors the average price of 16 basic grocery items from states across the country. Its most recent average price total increased by approximately 2 percent.

Earth Day to be celebrated on Monday

On April 22, 1970, 20 million people celebrated the first Earth Day. Since then our planet has faced many environmental challenges, but has also made great strides in protecting and preserving our natural resources. This year Earth Day will be celebrated on Monday, April 22. Kentuckians will be hosting celebrations to honor our earth.

ronment a safer, healthier place to live, work and play. One way to do that is to take part in the Pick Five for the Environment program, a program sponsored by U.S. Environmental Protection Agency and the U.S. Department of State. The program encourages individuals to pick five actions to protect our environment. You can Pick Five for the Environment by taking action today:

Conserve Water
Turn the water off when brushing your teeth or washing your hands or face.

Flush the toilet only when necessary. Do not use the toilet as a wastebasket. Throw tissues, insects and other trash into the garbage not the toilet.

Limit showers to three - four minutes.

Use less than five inches of water when taking a bath.

Save Energy
Replace traditional incandescent light bulbs with ENERGY STAR-qualified compact fluorescent light bulbs (CFLs).

Check the temperature of refrigerators and freezers to make sure temperatures are within the recommended ranges.

PTSD involves examining puzzle pieces

by Chad Lougee,
Guest Contributor

To date, the largest jigsaw puzzle is made of 30,000 pieces. Every person has their own 30,000-piece puzzle—our personal puzzles come down to 365 days a year for 70 to 80 years.

Whenever we start a puzzle, we usually start with the edges first and work toward the middle. Each piece has different colors and different shapes; no two pieces are the same. Some pieces are full of color. Some are white, and some are black. Some pieces make up people, family friends and animals.

The question is, what is your puzzle going to be of? Is it going to be boring or is it going to be exciting?

Let's examine what these pieces mean for you and what they represent. The corner pieces are your parents, step-parents or those that have raised you. The four sides are, your brothers, sisters, nieces, nephews, aunts and uncles.

As you work on your image, you begin to see all the animals you had and all the accomplishments you achieved.

Everything you did in your entire life is in this one puzzle.

There is so much color and you are getting excited because you just cannot wait to see what the finished puzzle is going to look like. Most puzzles have a picture on the box to follow, but your puzzle has no picture.

The picture you need to follow is your own life. Every day, your life creates a new piece. Unlike a full puzzle that you dump on the table, your puzzle pieces show up one day at a time.

All of the joy you had because of the colors of your animals and memories are now fading fast. You are now thinking, "Is there any hope of getting this joy back? Why are these black pieces coming up on my image?"

Now, you are just finishing your image. It has taken you at least 40 years to complete yourself. After dealing with a lot of mental health issues, you have learned that you now have posttraumatic stress disorder (PTSD). Everything that has happened to you has left pieces behind, and you are now finding out that these pieces are the black ones that are full of PTSD and anxiety.

By working with a therapist, you can learn just how to change the black pieces to color, one at a time. The most important thing to remember is that it is going to take time. As you start working with a therapist in relation to your friends, the black pieces are now starting to show up. These pieces, however, are where your friends connect to you.

Come to find out, after you have been talking with your therapist, you find you have been keeping too much in and pushing people away. Every time they try to help with some experience they had, you do not want to hear it because you just do not want to think about it.

The hardest thing to learn with PTSD is boundaries—when to keep people out and when to let people in. As much as we do not want to live life with PTSD, we cannot just skip a few days or weeks by overtaking medication or depending on alcohol. Life will always continue one day at a time, and it is up to us to turn our 30,000-piece puzzle into one of three options:

Option 1: A puzzle that looks like a pile of trash.

Option 2: A collection of pieces that look all bent and torn up.

Option 3: A grand puzzle that looks like the Garden of Eden.

(Chad Lougee, a resident of Marion since 2003, suffers from posttraumatic stress disorder (PTSD) due to childhood abuse. Through sharing his experiences and those of friends with PTSD, he hopes to help others who suffer from the disorder to see that there is light at the end of the tunnel. Lougee owns and operates Marion Computer Repair.)

Origins of Mott City and its founding explained

I realize as I get ready to send this article in to The Crittenden Press, that many people know more and have many memories about the Mott City community than I will ever know. But the following is a wonderful article, and for those who didn't see it when it was first printed, it's worth re-printing. Many of us had never seen the article when it was first printed. A grandson of Elmer Mott, Terry Mott, the son of Glenn Mott, shared the article with me.

Willard Mott, also the son of Elmer Mott, originally shared this article with The Press in February 1990. He had found it in some of his father's papers. Many of the Mott descendants still live here today.

Mott City could have been known as Mottsville

First printed in The Crittenden Press on Feb. 22, 1990, and written by Elmer Mott in 1972.

"I'd like to give you a little rundown on a place called 'Mott City.' It is located about seven miles south of Marion on Hwy. 91 at Junction 70.

"Everything started when Virgil Hale rented a small piece of ground on the old John Rorer farm. He then built a small building about 12x12 feet where he set up a watermelon stand. This was brought to a sudden stop when thieves broke in and stole the melons.

"After the theft, I bought the building and added 12 more feet. I used it for stocking groceries, but as with Mr. Hale, the store was robbed of everything except for some Merry War Lye.

"After the store was restocked, I added a regular sleeping room in the back. The highest I took in one day was 48 cents, the first month I was there.

"My wife and I had a small family consisting of two sons, Willard and Glenn. By this time, they were old enough to help me quite a bit around both the house and the store.

"I was afraid that the thieves weren't going to be satisfied with just robbing the store, so I bought my wife a .38 pistol. As another precaution, whenever I would have to leave the house, I would take one of the boys with me and leave the other at home to be with my wife.

Brenda Underdown

"It was as I figured, in a few nights, they came to the house, which was in Mexico, and acted as if they were going to knock down the door. That's when the gun I had given her came in handy. She opened the door and fired over their heads, but it still scared them away. After the word spread around that she wasn't afraid to shoot, we didn't have any more unwelcome guests.

"She would do a lot of target practice any time she saw a crowd around the blacksmith shop across the road.

"The first person to call the place 'Mott City' was an old gentleman by the name of Dick Cruce, who lived on the other side of Crayne.

"He would come down to the store to have someone to talk with. One day, he said, 'Elmer, why don't you call this place Mott City?'

"I told him Mottsville would be better because Mott City sounded as if it was truly a large city, and it was just a shack on the side of the road. There were only four old houses.

"I finally was able to buy the ground from Mr. Rorer on Jan. 20, 1932, as I wanted to build a new and better building. On Feb. 23, 1932, I gave Mr. J.N. Boston the contract to build my new store and home combined.

"At that time, all the banks were going busted, so a friend of mine came to me and suggested I get my money before the banks went broke. So I drew it out and had it in my pocket.

"I asked Mr. Boston if I deposited the money, would he build the building? He said the building would stand good for it, so I asked if he would build it if I paid cash. He said he would, so I pitched the contract on his desk with the cash.

"The store was built with our living room on one side and the kitchen on the back. We had a thin curtain over the door between the store and the kitchen so my wife could help me watch the store. She saw some (people) reaching across the counter into our cash drawer.

"I had gas pumps in the front and a grease rack on the side of the store. Standard Oil sent me a plaque thanking me for my business since 1930.

"Virgil Hale was my cousin. He built another store close to his house across the railroad about a half-mile from my place.

"Virgil had tuberculosis, and I had asthma caused from working in the spar mines and working in all kinds of weather. So we had to quit the mines and start our stores. We bought stock together so we could get a better price. We would buy one case of anything at one time and split it.

"Times were so tough, the old silver dollar looked like a wagon wheel to us. They were few and far between in that day.

"Young people laugh and say, 'I wouldn't work that hard,' but when your baby begins to cry for his bottle and the bottle isn't in sight, you are going to hunt for it.

"But back to the store. My boys had grown up some. They were about getting old enough to deliver groceries for me, so I bought an old Chevy car. I paid $10 for it.

"They could only go to Mexico. Back then, there wasn't a highway, so there was hardly any traffic. It would take most of the day to deliver just a few things. The car would run for a while, and then they would have to work on it to get it running again. They would leave in mid-morning and not get home until late afternoon. But the boys enjoyed it, and they were learning how to fix motors, too.

"I decided to put up a grease rack and let the boys have a road service outside the store. I told them when they had some money to give it to their mother. She kept it for them until they had enough to buy a new truck. I never had to add to it. They bought it themselves.

"Thanks to all the people, both the boys, my wife and I had a good business. In those days, customers weren't allowed behind the counter. The owner had to get what ever they wanted.

"Later on, we put up a block filling station, and both boys worked it until they called both boys to be examined for the Army.

"Them days were sure blue. Willard passed the test and went to the Army. Dr. T. Athinson Frazer examined them. He told Glenn he could turn him down, but he sent him on to Evansville; they turned him down.

"We hired a man to help us and went on about our business. When Willard came back from service, he sold his part of the station to Glenn. Later, Glenn sold out of the station business.

"Both boys went into the concrete block business.

They couldn't sell them as fast as they could make them, so Willard bought Glenn out and went into the lumber business. They divided the land with me, and I kept only the store.

"Glenn worked in Evansville a while and was in the construction business a while. Then he started a lumber yard at Lake City, down by Kentucky Dam.

"Due to my health, I had to sell the store. Carl Brasher and Mr. Clark bought it. It was later sold to Dixon Adams and then to John Holloman.

"We had other merchants forbidding salesmen to stop with us. An oil man got us selling his oil. We would order four or five cases at a time. He said he got a letter from his company to cut us out, so the second day we got a letter from Standard Oil (telling us to) watch our gas, but we could get plenty of oil. So we got the same oil out of Princeton and went ahead about our business. We had plenty of other kinds of oil.

"When relief and WPA came out and the mines had pay day, all stores were busy. The first relief slip that came to me was from a crippled man. He came in crying and asked me to fill it. It was for $3.50, so I filled it. He said, 'Elmer, I hate to have to do this.' I told him if any man in the country needed it, it was him. He had three or four children and (he was) not able to work. At first, you really had to have (need) to be eligible for assistance.

"Next, there was an old gentleman that I knew. He had been trying to get a pension. His wife had a tumor. He sent me a note telling me that when my customers came in from the mines to ask them to help him and his family. They were hungry.

"He had sent the note by a boy. I loaded a basket of things I thought they were needing and took the boy home. When I went in the house, he began to cry. His wife was lying on the bed, swollen from the tumor. I told him I would go in to town and see what I could do about getting him a pension.

"I went to the office and told the story. One man looked over his glasses and asked, 'Ain't he got a house?' I told him, 'Yes, but it's just an old one. The doors are made out of rough 1-inch by 10-inch planks, and he's so feeble he can hardly get around. His wife is in bed, bad sick with a tumor.'

"They gave him a $12 pension every month. This was just how folks lived back then."

Stories such as these are a rare treasure to have, for it has preserved not only the history of how a local community got its name, but it tells how families lived and survived in these days of long ago.

Crittenden Circuit Clerk's office celebrates Donate Life Month

STAFF REPORT

"This April, and every day, I am proud of the impact this office has on the lives of others, especially those in need of life-saving organ transplants. I am humbled at the generosity of our community," says Crittenden County Circuit Clerk, Melissa Guill. "Even through tough economic times, our community is committed to helping others."

The circuit clerk's office plays a vital role in helping patients in need. With nearly 1,000 Kentuckians on the waiting list for an organ transplant, the need is greater than ever. The driver's license clerks ask every person obtaining a license or ID to donate $1 to the Kentucky Organ Donor Program, and if they wish to be a registered organ donor.

"I am honored to announce that in 2012, 235 Crittenden County residents gave hope to patients in need by becoming registered organ donors," explains Guill.

Of 2,111 licenses issued last year, the Crittenden county driver's license staff collected $1,272 to help the Circuit Clerk's organ donor awareness program. These dollar donations go to a separate non-profit called Trust For Life. With these funds, the Trust educates Kentucky about the life-saving mission of organ donation through community outreach programs, public speaking and advertising efforts.

Each day 18 people die awaiting a life-saving organ transplant. The Circuit Clerk's office and the dedicated residents of Crittenden County are working to end the wait and save more lives. As of January 2013, Kentuckians who renew their license can have a blue organ donor heart printed on their ID.

"Every heart we print gives hope to patients in need. We hope everyone will understand that you no longer have to sign the back of your license or use an orange dot. Simply say 'Yes' when you renew your ID to add your name to the confidential Kentucky Organ Donor Registry," explains Guill.

Any adult Kentucky resident can join the Kentucky Organ Donor Registry at their circuit clerk's office or online at www.donatelife.org. Any Crittenden County person touched by the mission of organ donation is encouraged to tell their Gift of Life story through the Trust For Life website www.trustforlife.org.

For more information call (866) 945-LIFE, e-mail info@trustforlife.org or go to www.trustforlife.org.

Support group for widowed persons open to Crittenden

STAFF REPORT

Residents of Crittenden, Caldwell and Lyon counties are encouraged to attend the next Widowed Persons Support session at 11 a.m., next Thursday at Echo Charlie's at Eddy Creek Marina in Lyon County.

Virginia Oldham, facilitator of the monthly meetings, said individuals who attend these gatherings are far removed from the initial grief resulting from the loss of a spouse. Affiliated with the Pennyroyal Center's Princeton Clinic, Oldham said grief counseling is not offered at the meetings. Instead, she said the meetings currently provide a social gathering and activity for about 10 to 15 octogenarians who reside in Caldwell and Lyon counties.

She said it is a blessing to work with the individuals in the group and would like to see Crittenden County residents join.

"It's open to anybody and you don't have to be an octogenarian. You just have to be someone who is looking for a social connection and interaction with others," Oldham said.

Incorporated into the meetings are discussions and informational materials important to seniors such as nutrition, how to avoid scams and fraud, elder abuse and how to stay safe and the importance of checking on the welfare of fellow senior citizens.

For more information about Widowed Person's Support, contact Oldham at the Pennyroyal Center's Princeton Clinic at 365-2008, extension 725.

CBS Sports Network will broadcast an edited version of the NCA Cheer Championships at 11 a.m., April 28.

Tinsley, the daughter of Steve and Laura Tinsley of Marion, is a sophomore studying Spanish Education. She is a Crittenden County High School graduate and former member of the Rocket cheerleading squad.

This is Tinsley first year to compete on the university's 20-member squad.

Campbellsville's performance was sixth among subtotal scores, but the squad showed strong accuracy for the second straight day, losing only one point in deductions to finish at 80.30.

Last season, Campbellsville finished sixth among six finalists after winning the 2012 Challenge Cup to earn its way back into the finals.

The NAIA Invitational is part of the overall NCA and NDA Collegiate Cheer and Dance Championships, which is considered the largest college cheer and dance championships in the world.

The three-day event includes 17 divisions of cheerleading championships and 12 dance championships, which all concluded Friday.

Rockets knocked out of Class A

Crittenden County lost 5-0 to Webster County in the semifinals of the Touchstone Second Region All A Classic Baseball Tournament Tuesday at Dawson Springs. Details of the semifinal round game were not available at press time.

Crittenden's bats awoke for the first round of the All A Classic Second Region Baseball Tournament Monday at Gordon Blue Guess Field in Marion. The Rockets (5-10) smashed nine hits and scored a pile of runs in dispatching Dawson Springs 19-1 in just five innings.

Center field Aaron Owen had a huge day at the plate, collecting two hits, including a double and driving in three runs. He also scored three. Travis Gilbert scored four and drove in two and Taylor Champion drove in three runs without a hit. Eli Bebout, Shelby Robinson and Dylan Hollis also had two hits apiece and Brenden Phillips had a single and drove in a run. Hollis knocked in two.

It was the Rockets' best offensive output of the season, helped in part by 10 Dawson Springs' (1-7) errors.

Bebout went four innings on the mound, allowed five walks and struck out two. Colby Watson closed it out in the fifth.

Taylor Champion went 3-for-4 at the plate, but Marshall County (12-5) blanked the Rockets 9-0 Friday at the Dinger Bats Wood Bat Classic at Graves County.

The team's leadoff hitter, Champion was on three times and Eli Bebout had two hits, but Crittenden couldn't put anything together to score runs. Travis Gilbert and Devin Belt also singled in the game. Marshall's pitcher walked just one and struck out four.

The Marshals had 11 hits off three Rocket pitchers. Gilbert went the first 4.1 innings but struggled with his con-

Brenden Phillips had two hits in four trips to the plate as Crittenden fell by one to Grandview, Mo., at Mayfield Saturday in day two of the wooden bat tournament.

Aaron Owen scored twice in the game after being moved to the leadoff spot. Taylor Champion, who had been hitting first, was slotted at the third spot and went 1-for-3. Champion has the Rockets' hottest bat this spring. He was batting over .370 after this game. Hardly anyone else was over .200.

The game was close the whole way, but Grandview went up for good in the fifth, scoring two runs on an RBI double and an RBI single off Taylor Champion, who was the last of three Rocket pitchers. Owen started the game and lasted just one inning. Colby Watson came on in the second and allowed no runs in three innings of work.

Zack Knight, Champion and Owen each had singles in the game.

SOFTBALL

The Lady Rockets lost 3-1 in their opening round of the All A Classic Second Region Softball Tournament Monday at Dawson Springs.

The Lady Panthers (2-6) beat Crittenden County (2-7) for the first time in two tries this season. Crittenden had won the teams' previous meeting earlier this month at Marion. The Crittenden girls' other victory this year was against Hopkinsville.

Cassidy Moss pitched a good game, striking out six, but two errors and a single allowed Dawson to score two runs in the sixth to garner the win.

Cassidy and Khyla Moss, Stacie Hearell, Danielle Byarley, Kali Travis and Kayla Davis each singled for Crittenden. Travis' hit came in the fifth when she scored to tie the game at 1.

SUBMITTED PHOTO

archaeological sites in the world brought new perspective to our cultural experience. The ruins at Pompeii uncovered an advanced civilization with shops, homes, temples, public baths and a market. The body casts of natives buried in the ash from the eruption of Mount Vesuvius offered us a somber portrait of the last moments of their lives.

We took away a better understanding of the people that make up Italy, not just today, but from its Old World heritage as well. Their ingenuity, artisanship and appreciation for good food made for a welcome and robust change of pace.

However, I also came away with a better understanding of the impact of an experience like this on students. It's not just the sights, but appreciating that we can learn and grow from cultures other than our own. And it's not just the souvenirs, it's interacting with the local people and observing how they make their living. Finally, it's not just the gelato, but the camaraderie of being in Italy with friends.

be entered 8:30-9:30 a.m., that morning. The show will be open to visitors 10 a.m.-3 p.m. Quilts may be picked up 3-3:30 p.m.

The Backroads Quilt Show is coordinated by the Homemakers Association and is open to the public to display quilts or quilt tops. A quilt does not have to be made by the exhibitor to be displayed in the show. Quilts and quilt tops can be of any size. Old or heirloom quilts are welcome, too.

"We try to get people who have not brought quilts or quilt tops before," said Homemaker Sarah Ford. An information card should be attached to each quilt. Cards can be picked up at the Crittenden County Extension Office on U.S. 60 East before the show or at city hall on the day of the show.

Quilts will be for viewing only and will not be judged. However, spectators will vote for the show favorite, or The People's Choice Award winner. The recipient of the honor will be announced at 3 p.m.

Ford said great effort is made to ensure participants the quilts will be in good care. "A quilt is special to a lot of people, especially if it is made by a member of the family,"

she said. "We try to be very careful about handling them."

Signs will be posted that quilts are not to be touched by the public. If those visiting the show would like to see details of a particular quilt, Ford said Homemaker members will wear white gloves to show the quilt.

As a special feature to the show, quilts and quilt tops by local quilting authority JoAnne Winn and her family members will be featured in a display in the lobby of city hall.

cases, but their charges will be dismissed if they complete pretrial diversion requirements. Those individuals were Cody Hackney and Austin S. Russell.

Hackney, 20, of Marion, received pretrial diversion on two drug trafficking charges, both Class D felonies. Conditions of his diversion are that he complete Drug Court and serve 60 days in jail, minus credit for time served.

Russell, 18, of Marion, pleaded guilty to two Class D felonies for custodial interference and auto theft.

■ Judge Williams also revoked the probation of Rebecca Tiffany Myers, 23, of Marion. According to court testimony by a probation and parole officer, Myers had recently received charges and/or convictions for DUI and writing cold checks in two other counties. She was on felony probation from two Crittenden County convictions in 2010.

The original sentences in those cases were five years and one year. She was ordered to serve the balance of those sentences.
